The Act comes into operation with the exception of Parts 4 (universal Service) and 6 (interception) of Chapter V (telecommunications services), and Chapter IX (establishment and incorporation .na domain name association).

The Act establishes CRAN, to provide for the regulation of telecommunications services and networks, broadcasting, postal services and the use and allocation of radio spectrum.

CRAN will drive a vibrant ICT sector contributing effectively to national development and drawing in direct foreign investment. The ICT sector has regionally become one of the largest contributors to government tax revenue.

Licence transition process

The Act provides for a licence transition period to commence when the Act commences. During the transition period, CRAN will focus on stakeholders' engagement with the purpose of achieving its transition objectives.

In preparation of the commencement of the Act and the licence transition period, CRAN made, inter alia, the following regulations:

- Broadcasting and Telecommunications Service Licence Categories
- Transitional Procedures for Telecommunications and Broadcasting Service Licences and Spectrum Use Licences

In addition, a practice manual has been developed, which outlines the licence transition process, and which can be accessed from CRAN website www.cran.na

The licence transition to be carried out by CRAN will apply to the following licensees and other entities -

- Existing telecommunications and broadcasting service and network licensees
- Persons lawfully providing a telecommunications or broadcasting service or network without a licence (including the Namibian Broadcasting Corporation)
- Telecom Namibia Limited (in respect of its deemed licence)
- Persons with pending licence applications before the Namibian Communications Commission at immediately prior to the commencement of the Act
